

The Indiana Biomedical Society, and the greater biomed community, has lost one of our own this week. Philomena (Phil) Diehl passed away on the afternoon of August 24th. Phil was a founding member of the IBS, and has been a pillar of strength for the society since 1990. She served as an officer for several years, was coordinator for the annual conference, and has been responsible for the society's newsletter. Phil was employed as a CBET at Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis, where she also served as a great supporter for the biomed intern program. Please join us in remembering her, and her contributions to the profession that she supported with great passion and energy.

Respectfully,
IBS Board of Directors
